THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON
Eruv Sabbath, 1990

I am pleased to send greetings to Congregation Keshet Israel and to the Orthodox Jewish community in Washington as you celebrate the inauguration of the first eruv in the District of Columbia.

The construction of this eruv is particularly significant not only because it marks the growth of the Orthodox Jewish community in Washington but also because this city is our Nation's Capital. Indeed, there is a long tradition linking the establishment of eruvin with the secular authorities in the great political centers where Jewish communities have lived. In the words of a responsa of Rabbi Moses Sofer: "Bless the Lord, God of Israel, who has inclined the hearts of kings, rulers, and officers -- under whose sovereign jurisdiction we, the Jewish people find protection -- to grant permission to us to keep our faith in general, and specifically to establish eruvin in their thoroughfares, even on streets where the most important members of the government themselves live . . . in this city, there are places where we need to install a number of objects in order to create an eruv and we have not hidden our work, rather, it is publicized and open to all without doubt and permission has been granted."

Now, you have built this eruv in Washington, and the territory it covers includes the Capitol, the White House, the Supreme Court, and many other Federal buildings. By permitting Jewish families to spend more time together on the Sabbath, it will enable them to enjoy the Sabbath more and promote traditional family values, and it will lead to a fuller and better life for the entire Jewish community in Washington. I look upon this work as a favorable endeavor. God bless you.
